What are the different types of relationships?

Human Relationships: Connection is in Our Biology

Human beings are wired to connect with other humans.

Our sexuality is only one part of the need for connection and it has ensured humankind has continued for many years on Earth.

We also have many other ways to feel connected, which, is why throughout our lives we will have relationships of all different kinds.

When you become an adult, having a loving, committed relationship can bring great joy, beauty, and happiness to your life.

Understanding how to have safe and healthy relationships is one of the most important things you will ever learn.

Know Your Terms: Relationships

Family Relationships: Relationships within our biological family (sibling, parent, relatives). Many people also have close relationships with people whom they consider family, but may not be biologically related to us.

Friendships: Relationships with our peers and/or classmates

Professional Relationships: Relationships with people at work and/or school

Romantic Relationships: Relationships between partners in which love, affection, and/or sexual intimacy may be shared in committed relationships, for example marriage.

What is the Difference Between Healthy and Unhealthy Relationships?

Unhealthy v. Healthy Relationships Online

Know the signs of unhealthy online relationships:

1. A person who you don't know in real life tries to get information or "friend you"
2. A person asks you to share partly nude or fully nude photos/videos of yourself
3. A person asks for your location or tries to get information about where you live/go to school
4. A person threatens you with bullying, violence, or "outing you."

The image shows a screenshot of a digital T-chart template. The title at the top is "Healthy v. Unhealthy Relationships". Below the title, there are two columns: "Healthy Relationships" on the left and "Unhealthy Relationships" on the right. The text "List some characteristics of a healthy relationship and some characteristics of an unhealthy relationship" is written across the top of the columns. The T-chart is currently empty, with only the header and column labels visible.
